

Weather Today

Fair, Warmer.

Silver and Lead Quotations

The silver and lead quotations yesterday were as follows:

Silver, 67 1/2 cents.

Lead, 10 1/2 cents.

Copper, 10 1/2 cents.

NOTICE

The Daily Herald to mail subscribers must be paid in advance for the time ordered. Old subscribers must comply with this rule on or before June 1st. After that date all papers not paid for in advance will be discontinued.

THE HERALD COMPANY.

CITY CIRCULATION

The City Circulation of the Herald has been leased to Mr. J. O. McCracken. Subscribers who do not receive their papers promptly will confer a favor if they make complaint to The Herald printing plant.

All checks for city subscriptions should be made payable to J. O. McCracken, City Circulation.

TOWN TALK.

A. L. Hoover, wife and daughter, Des Moines, are at the Walker Hotel.

Willard Thomas was fined $10 by Justice Weaver for carrying concealed weapons.

D. H. Haskell and wife, San Francisco residents, were registered at the Templeton.

Miss Geneva Jennings will sing a soprano solo at the Congregational church service this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Shirley Vance Martin, of Chicago, stopped in the city yesterday for a short stay.

Walter Clarke Bellows, stage director of the Wright Huntington Stock company, arrived in the city yesterday.

The Thirtieth Quorum of Seventies will meet in the Twentieth ward meeting house Monday evening, May 10, 1937.

P. M. Walker, of Pulaski, and Miss Margaret M. Hunter, of Salt Lake, were married yesterday in marriage by Justice McMaster.

Marriage licenses were issued yesterday to Jacob Edwards, 24, and Belle Clement, 27, both of Lima, Mont.; E. L. Cook, 29, and Minnie Bell, 27, both of Bountiful.

Baseball teams from the job rooms of the Tribune and the Utah Lithograph company played a game of baseball yesterday, the latter winning by a score of 12 to 10.

Thomas P. Thomas, who served as messenger during the recent session of the legislature, has been called out of the legislature to the southern states and will leave in July next.

Mrs. William Carroll, wife of the well known architect, had the misfortune a few days ago to fall from a ladder, breaking her leg at the ankle. Dr. McKenna is attending her.

Yesterday's clearings were $22,244, as compared with $22,330 for the same day of last year. The week's clearings footed up $1,583,809, as compared with $1,591,308 for the corresponding week of 1936.

The championship debate between the members of the Garfield Lyceum will take place at the First Congregational church next Friday evening.

Bob and W. Dale, who now holds the championship and Robert N. Young.

The Hon. E. G. Woolley of St. George, is in the city visiting relatives. He has some idea of locating here permanently, and if he decides to do so, he will be long to St. George and a gain to Salt Lake.

President Josh Davis of the Blue Church requests all officers of the society to meet at 8 o'clock tonight at the White House drug store to make final arrangements for the grand initiation to take place at the O. A. R. hall on Tuesday evening.

The regular quarterly meeting of the management of the Oremans Home and Day Nursery will be held on Monday afternoon at the home on State street, after which a reception will be tendered all those interested in the work from 10 until 11 p. m.

The funeral of the late James R. Hall, who was drowned on Wednesday night, will take place at the First ward meeting house today at 12 m.

The remains may be viewed at the family residence, 607 W. 1st, from 10 a. m. to 12 m.

The funeral of Claire Marguerite, the little daughter of Ed N. and Mrs. Kirby, who died on Friday, will take place at 2 o'clock this afternoon from the residence of Mrs. G. W. Phillips, 314 Fourth street.

Rev. W. H. Phillips, 314 Fourth street, will officiate. Burial will be in the cemetery. The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock.

The state board of labor, conciliation and arbitration, composed of John Nicholson, chairman, and E. A. W. and W. A. Williams, met at the Capitol building yesterday and formally organized by adopting the constitution.

After some minor business an adjournment was taken until Monday at 2 p. m., when rules and regulations will be adopted.

The men who entered the Ford board of directors on Sunday afternoon, were arrested in the police court yesterday morning.

Joe Morris and Joseph Smith pleaded guilty to the same charge and were sentenced to 30 days in jail.

Joe Morris was not directly connected with the affair but got 30 days for carrying a concealed weapon.

Captain J. R. Middleman and Max Lipson were arrested on Sunday afternoon in front of Loomis's place of business.

After a few minutes' detention, they were released. Middleman was charged with carrying a concealed weapon.

The two were released and the case was continued until Monday.

The report of the health department last week indicates that there is not a single case of contagious or infectious disease in the city.

It has been entirely eradicated and will continue to be so for some time.

The excellent work of the health department has been recognized by the city fathers.

The city fathers have decided to award a prize to the health department.

The prize is a gold medal and a certificate of appreciation.

The health department will receive the prize on Monday.

The health department will also receive a check for $100.

The health department will also receive a certificate of appreciation.

The health department will also receive a gold medal.

The health department will also receive a certificate of appreciation.

The health department will also receive a gold medal.

The health department will also receive a certificate of appreciation.

The health department will also receive a gold medal.

The health department will also receive a certificate of appreciation.

The health department will also receive a gold medal.

The health department will also receive a certificate of appreciation.

The health department will also receive a gold medal.

The health department will also receive a certificate of appreciation.

The health department will also receive a gold medal.

The health department will also receive a certificate of appreciation.

The health department will also receive a gold medal.

The health department will also receive a certificate of appreciation.

The health department will also receive a gold medal.

The health department will also receive a certificate of appreciation.

The health department will also receive a gold medal.

The health department will also receive a certificate of appreciation.

The health department will also receive a gold medal.

The health department will also receive a certificate of appreciation.

The health department will also receive a gold medal.

The health department will also receive a certificate of appreciation.

The health department will also receive a gold medal.

The health department will also receive a certificate of appreciation.

The health department will also receive a gold medal.

The health department will also receive a certificate of appreciation.

The health department will also receive a gold medal.

The health department will also receive a certificate of appreciation.

The health department will also receive a gold medal.

The health department will also receive a certificate of appreciation.

The health department will also receive a gold medal.

The health department will also receive a certificate of appreciation.

SOME LIVING PIONEERS.

Amni Jackman entered this valley September 20, 1847, with Charles C. Rich's company. He was one of the volunteers who carried the first mail back to the east, the others being Sam Lewis, David Stuart, Garner Riles, Corbitt and Blackburn. They started on March 12 and were three days in reaching the top of Big Mountain, but on account of the deep snow they found it impossible to proceed further by that route and started out by way of Weber canyon. They endured great suffering on the journey, and were 33 days without anything to eat but roots and horse flesh. They fell into the hands of the Pawnee Indians, who were then on the war path. The rode took their meat and most of their ammunition, but after being detained a few hours they were liberated by the chief of the tribe. The journey to Winter Quarters occupied six weeks and the weary and footsore travelers were welcomed at their destination by Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball and others.

Mr. Jackman greatly distinguished himself by his fortitude and perseverance during this trying time. He has a number of valuable and interesting relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made in Utah. The wood of which it is constructed was cut in Red Butte canyon, and the seat is from the hide of an ox which helped to haul the first pioneers to the valley. He has also a sword supposed to have belonged to George Washington, a piece of the original Declaration of Independence, and the "Liberty and Independence." On the scabbard is the figure of the goddess of Liberty. The sword was bought by Mr. Jackman's father in 1832 from an Indian chief, who said that it had been presented to him by a great white chief, and that at one time it belonged to the great white chief, George Washington.

Mr. Jackman also has a horse pistol which was made by melting up pewter dishes brought from Holland in the 17th century by one of Mr. Jackman's ancestors.

relics of ancient days in his possession, including one of the first chairs made